Now — with unprecedented success — the comforts of home have been beautifully translated to the requirements of travel trailer and fifth wheel living.

One look, and you'll agree: The Jayco Designer Series truly is residential — in its styling, its feel, its overall "attitude." It's the perfect travel accommodation for people who demand real home-style luxury.

For all its residential appeal, however, the Designer Series is tough. It's built for people who are serious about travel; people on the go, who need accommodations that will hold up to their rigorous way of life.

That's especially evident in the Designer Series' laminated sidewalls. The materials that go into them are vacuum-bonded together. This creates a bond that's actually stronger than the materials themselves. Result: Designer Series sidewalls are the strongest in the industry. And you can count on it — year after year, mile after mile.

You can also count on the Designer Series to provide you the space you need for gracious living. Every Fifth Wheel model, but one, is available with Jayco's exclusive SuperSlide slideouts. They're huge! And they add much more than space: They add immensely to the comfort of the interior, giving you that feeling of freedom one experiences in today's finest "open-concept" homes.

CONSTRUCTION

In addition to their meticulous craftsmanship, so appealing to the eye, Designer Series™ travel trailers and fifth wheels are built to endure. That's a Jayco hallmark — reflecting 25 years of design and engineering excellence.

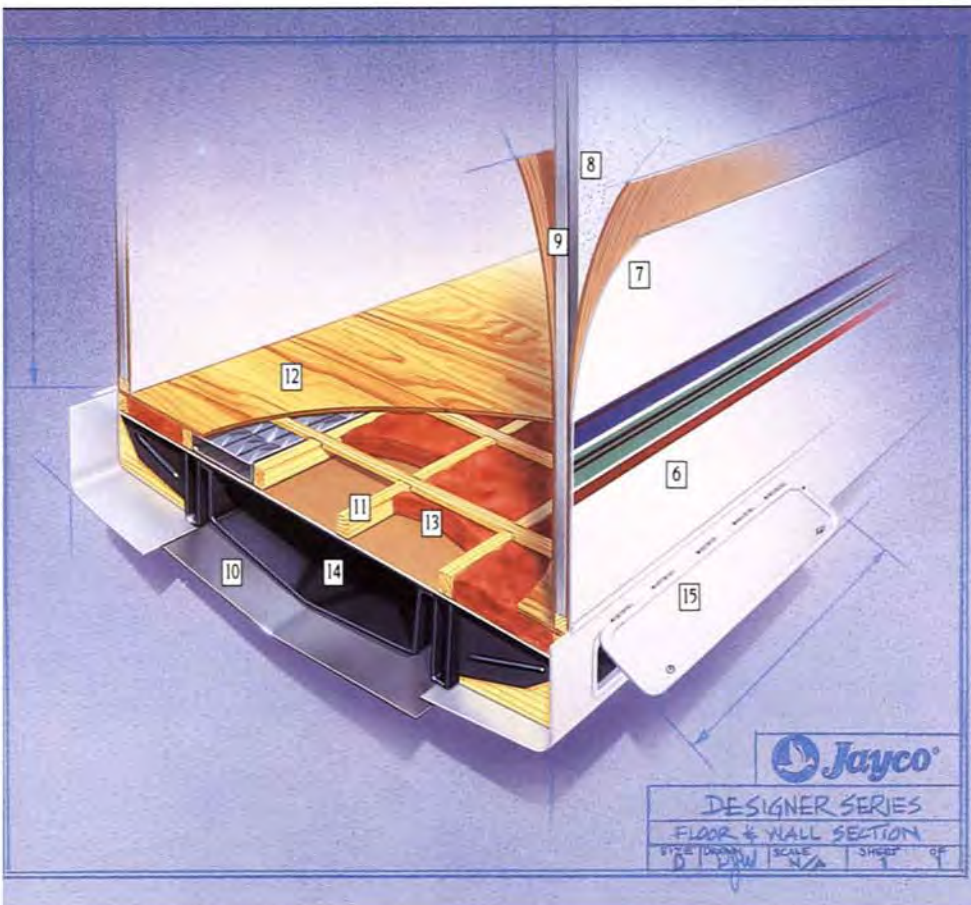

Features like these make the difference:

1. A standard, seamless rubber roof that helps keep the interior quiet.
2. A 3/8" plywood deck, to which the rubber is bonded. This roof deck is strong enough to walk on. (The front portion only of Designer Series fifth wheels is 1/4"-thick luan.)
3. A 2x4 tapered rafter system. It allows room for the ducting that comes with Jayco's standard central air conditioning.
4. Fiberglass and Fome-Cor® insulation. With a total R-8 insulation factor.
5. A stylish front end cap of molded fiberglass that resists dents and scratches; provides exceptional strength.
6. Laminated sidewalls — the industry's strongest — vacuum-bonded to make each entire wall more structurally sound. Vacuum-bonding is far superior to pinch-roller lamination, because, a) it uses a urethane adhesive that actually creates a bond stronger than the materials being bonded, and b) the laminated materials are kept under pressure for about 45 minutes, as opposed to the mere seconds other lamination processes use.
7. A smooth fiberglass outer skin — actually molded in one large sheet to a luan plywood backer. It has a thick gel-coat finish, too, which gives the surface a bright, lustrous, high-gloss sheen. This is then laminated to ...
8. 1-1/2" polystyrene substrate insulation with an R-7 insulation factor ...
9. And a frame that includes aluminum reinforcement for additional strength.
10. A completely enclosed underbelly that fully protects all systems and has removable holding tank covers for easy maintenance access.
11. A 2x3 floor system, with members running front to back. This allows the heating ducts to run full-length.
12. A strong 5/8" plywood deck with tongue-and-groove joints.
13. Floor insulation of R-7 fiberglass and R-1 Fome-Cor, the latter of which also insulates the heat ducts to reduce heat loss.
14. Enclosed holding tanks and plumbing with heat ducted to them to prevent freezing. This, among other notable features, makes the Designer Series ideal for year-round travel in virtually any weather.
15. Large storage compartments with protective "automotive" liners.

JAYCO. A FAMILY TRADITION FOR 25 YEARS.

Twenty-five years. Such a long time. Yet it seems like only yesterday that Lloyd J. Bontrager's dream of Jayco became a reality.

It was a dream founded on the highest principles ... nurtured by sound, traditional values ... and shaped by a desire to strengthen and preserve America's families through shared recreation experiences.

"Family" became the word by which Jayco grew and prospered. And everyone associated with Jayco was treated like family — Jayco employees, Jayco dealers, and Jayco customers alike.

Back in 1968, the company's first year, Jayco turned out 132 fold-down camping trailers in Lloyd's barn and chicken house in Middlebury, Indiana. The company quickly outgrew these facilities. It expanded its product line, too. And over the years, Jayco earned a formidable reputation for travel trailers, fifth wheels, mini motorhomes, and truck campers, as well as fold-downs. Today, Jayco is one of the largest RV manufacturers in the U.S.

The reason for its success is obvious. Year after year, Jayco has remained true to its mission. It's still very much a family oriented company; still very much committed to traditional values.

In that respect, RVers know we're not just selling recreation vehicles. They understand that we're selling a way of life; a way for families to enjoy being together.

That's the theme — the heart, if you will — of our 25th Anniversary. It is, in every sense, a "Family Celebration!" And in that spirit, we'd like to welcome you into the Jayco family!
